Our weakness... His glory

"You and your fighting men should march around the town once a day for six days..." (Joshua 6:3)

In today's world, it is difficult to admit we all have weaknesses and limitations. In our culture of "self-achievement" and the "American dream", it is easy to fill a sense of false pride of all that we have accomplished in our life. Our possessions and accolades can make us believe we don't really need any outside help.

Often in the Word of God we read accounts where God, and God alone, receives all the glory for the victory. Think of Joshua and Jericho, God's "battle plan" relied not on Joshua's ability but God's. Our culture wants us to make much of ourselves, while the goal of the Gospel is to make much of Christ. David Platt said it well, "This is how God works. He puts people in positions where they are desperate for his power, and then he shows his provision in ways that display his greatness."
